

The medical liability crisis continues to threaten access to quality health care in Illinois. A recent poll conducted by the American College of OB/GYNs found 22 percent of obstetricians in Illinois stopped practicing this year and another 10 percent are expected to quit by the end of the year. We need to pass comprehensive reforms now. That is why I joined a bipartisan Medical Malpractice Crisis Task Force to help educate my colleagues on the situation.